

BEHIND THE REDGIANT

Based in Viseu - Portugal, "behind the RedGiant" were born around 2010 with Rui Costa on bass, Campino (Ricardo Sousa) on guitar and João Sousa on drums. Shortly after, Pedro Ribeiro joins the band on keyboards.

Interspersed with some periods of complete inactivity, the band's lineup changed several times, starting with the departure of Pedro Ribeiro and João Sousa.

A few years later the project came back to life with the entry of João Esteves on drums and a little later with Alex Sousa on guitar.

Life took João Esteves out of the project before starting the recording of the album "how far is far away?", giving way to the current drummer, Alex Tomás in 2020.

In 2021, conditions were met to start recording their debut album. As a completely "in house" production, recording and mixing were only finished by the end of that year.

The German producer and sound engineer Dennis Koehne took over the mastering. Dennis had worked with bands like Lacuna Coil, Sodom, Moonspell, among many others. At the end of the work with Behind the REDGIANT he wrote on a social network:

"the band behind the RedGiant asked me to master their new album, which is an excellent instrumental rock/metal, performed at a very high level (...) I had the pleasure of mastering the complete album by the talented instrumental prog metal band behind the RedGiant (...)."

2022 becomes the year in which this project sees the light of day with the release of the album "how far is far away?". And so the journey begins.
